In addition to discussing some of our recent results on graphene, I offer a personal perspective of what new carbon (and related) materials might be achieved in the future. These include ‘negative curvature carbons’, ‘diamane’ and related ultrathin $sp^3$-bonded carbon films/foils, $sp^2/sp^3$-hybrid materials, and others.

References

Of possible interest:
2. Zhu, Yanwu; Murali, Shanthi; Stoller, Meryl D.; Ganesh, K. J.; Cai, Weiwei; Ferreira, Paulo J.; Pirkle, Adam; Wallace, Robert M.; Cychosz, Katie A.; Thommes, Matthias; Su, Dong; Stach, Eric A.; Ruoff, Rodney S. Carbon-Based Supercapacitors Produced by Activation of Graphene. Science 332, 1537-1541 (2011).
3. Odkhuu, Dorj; Shin, Dongbin; Ruoff, Rodney S.; Park, Noejung; Conversion of Multilayer Graphene Into Continuous Ultrathin sp3-bonded Carbon Films on Metal Surfaces Density. Scientific Reports (2013), DOI: 10.1038/srep03276.